Changing seasons can trigger SADness

□ There are many resources at the University to help students who suffer from seasonal affective disorder.

By TRACY WOOD
The BG News

As summer comes to a close and fall and winter approach, many people may start feeling a little under the weather. Some people, though, may actually be suffering from an extreme case of the winter blues called SAD.

SAD is short for Seasonal Affective Disorder. According to Dr. Joshua Kaplan, director of Health Services, anyone can suffer from some degree of the winter blues, but for some people it is more pronounced and causes problems.

The illness can be hard to diagnose due to symptoms similar to those of depression. People usually begin feeling under the weather starting sometime in October or November, and begin to feel better again in the spring around March or April. People who suffer from this illness usually have a history of feeling bad at the same time every year.

People who suffer from depression can feel bad at any time of the year, including the summer, and do not always start feeling better when the sun shines more.

Chris Drake, University graduate student, has done some research on SAD in the clinical psychology department. According to Drake's research, four to seven percent of the population suffers from this disorder, usually females in their early to mid twenties. People who suffer from the disorder usually live in the north; people living in the south report fewer cases of the illness.

Drake offers some advice to

Art in the fast LANE

□ Matthew Donahue returns to his roots with an exhibit featuring popular culture collages and photographs of his art cars and travel experiences.

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

When he was nine years old he fell in love with art and music. When he was in high school he was reading Rolling Stone magazine and was shocked to learn that the best pop culture school in the nation was thirty minutes away from his Toledo home.

Today Matthew Donahue, a doctoral student in American Culture Studies with an emphasis in pop culture, is starting with his love of art and music, and with the University's support, is creating art and making his dreams come true.

Workshop turns cars into pieces of art

□ Art-a-Car workshop offers participants a hands-on experience and a new perspective on art.

By BRANDI BARHITE
The BG News

Art is hitting the highways this weekend in downtown Bowling Green.

This Sunday, decorated bicycles, tricycles, golf cars and automobiles will be cruising

Main Street, capping a week long celebration of art and creativity.

This week the University is celebrating the 19th Annual New Music and Art Festival. In conjunction with the celebration, University students and local community members have been participating in an Art-a-Car workshop, with more activities scheduled for the weekend.

Art cars are becoming more popular, said Jacqui Nathan, director of the art gallery. People like them because they feel accessible and people are comfortable and familiar with cars, she said.

The Art-a-Car workshop Oct. 6-8 is an opportunity for students and community members to work with art car master David Best.

Car art involves taking a vehicle and turning it into a piece of art. An artist will use an automobile instead of a traditional canvas for creative expression.

Over 180 students are participating in creating an art car with Best. The Toledo Girls and Boys Clubs and Findlay High School have also been involved.

Composer featured in New Music Fest

□ Anthony Davis will appear in two programs for the Festival.

By ERIN BERGER
The BG News

Anthony Davis, an internationally-acclaimed composer, will visit BG today and Friday as the special guest composer for the 19th Annual New Music and Art Festival.

At 3:30 p.m. today there will be a seminar on Davis' music. According to Adam Zygmunt, interim coordinator of Mid-American Center for Contemporary Music, this session is mostly for composition students and anyone who is interested in the process of composition.

On Friday at 9 a.m., Davis will appear again for "Composer to Composer: A Dialogue with Anthony Davis." Donald M. Wilson, former University faculty member, will moderate this dialogue.

During the first half of the talk, Wilson will ask Davis questions. During the second half, anyone can ask questions.

Both of these activities will be held in Bryan Recital Hall in the Moore Musical Arts Center.

Marilyn Shrude, chairman of the festival and professor of music for the University, described Davis as "a very interesting composer who represents a lot of the more alternative classical music offering."

This is one of the reasons he was invited, according to Shrude. She believes having the chance to hear from Davis, whom she describes as "one of the most important living composers," will be a good experience for all, especially music students.

Davis is not the only visiting composer. There will be around 20 more, but Shrude said he is the biggest name of the group.

He came into national prominence in 1986 when his opera "X: The Life and Lives of Malcolm X" premiered to a sold-out house at the New York City Opera.

He received a Grammy nomination in 1992 and was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize for this work in 1984.

He has also received awards from the New York Foundation of the Arts, the National Endowment of the Arts, the Massachusetts Arts Council, the Carey Trust, Chamber Music America, Meet-the-Composer Wallace Fund and Opera America.

Davis is currently a professor of music at the University of California, San Diego.

Thinkers

Vulgarity on campus:

F**king is not an adjective

As a graduate student at BGSU, I am infuriated by and ashamed of the vulgar adjectives that are used so often in everyday conversation among the student population and therefore felt it was necessary to express my consternation on this matter.

How can it be that students who are attending an institution of higher learning so freely use the word "f**king" as an adjective in their everyday conversation? Having been a graduate student at BGSU for two years now, I am amazed and ashamed at how often I have heard this word used so frequently on campus, in the computer labs, fraternity houses, dorms and wherever conversations are taking place. If the frequent use of vulgarity becomes so much a part of one's everyday language, what kind of impression will you be leaving with potential future employers following job interviews? You will not have a clue as to why you didn't get the job.

I dare to think what kind of impression we are leaving with the many foreign students who are attending Bowling Green State University and who consider it an honor to be able to attend school here in the United States. Quite a dismal one, I would imagine. Having been in the work force for 20 years, I can tell you that you will not impress anyone with frequent use of vulgarity. It only serves to debase you and lower your own self-esteem as well as lessen the respect for you from your co-workers. Make a conscious effort now to correct a situation before it becomes an ingrained part of your life.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Gibson

Trust your reporter, not the grapevine

Even if you've never read a newspaper in your life, the media shapes the way you think. That means that reporters, editors and writers have an enormous amount of power — and an enormous amount of responsibility, as well.

News reports in magazines, newspapers and on television create a ripple effect. A particularly engrossing or shocking story is likely to be talked about, and the information given can reach people who are quite far removed from the original source.

Like the old game of "telephone", the message is usually quite garbled after it's passed around the populace a few times.

Here are but a few examples. Common knowledge has it that the Bowling Green water is of terrible quality. If you're new here, that's probably one of the first bits of information you might hear. Of course, there is the fact that it has a bit of an off taste, especially during summer months. But most water supplies in the Midwest aren't exactly sparkling environmental examples. How does anyone really know how bad BG's water is, if they don't have first-hand knowledge of the actual statistics?

BG's water quality has been an issue, but the last time I remember an article about it in The News was in late 1995 — outside the memory of most BG students. There hasn't been much of an update since, and I'm sure most people don't know exactly how bad BG water is, or how it compares nationally (though water quality does appear to be important, and perhaps The News will address it in the future).

Another example:

While in England I wrote a story for the campus newspaper about the leader of Iraq's chemical weapons program, a woman by the name of Rihab Taha al-Awazi. She had gotten her master's degree in biology at the university I was attending.

I spoke with her advisor, who had no inkling that she might become a possible agent of mass murder. I saw her master's thesis, which was on a plant disease that affects tobacco. It was not the kind of stuff you kill people with. In short, her education in England had little or nothing to do with her later career under Saddam Hussein.

Our student paper was tipped off by a story in the London Sunday Times, and from that article, it hit most of the national press.

From there, the story was repeated both in the campus media and in private, with various degrees of inaccuracy. Soon, the University of East Anglia had acquired a bit of a reputation as a scientific breeding ground for mass murdering terrorists, a bit of a contrast from the rather quiet humanities-heavy school it really is.

This is not to say that the entire onus of misinformation should be thrust upon people who dare to repeat what they read in the paper. Journalists are imperfect people. Like everyone else, we have our share of screwups, and the worst of us even lie.

However, there are safeguards. Although we don't always live up to it, journalists ascribe to a common code that your neighbor or your aunt doesn't necessarily have to think about.

We must check facts. We must not report anything that we aren't entirely sure of. We must attempt to eliminate bias and opinion from our reports. We must actively solicit opposing viewpoints.

Which is not to say, of course, that you can take anything in print as absolute truth. Intelligent readers will think about what's written and even consider things that the reporter might have missed.

And if you're going to pass something along, at least attribute it. It's the check on possibly faulty information. Use a journalist's rule, and instead of reporting something as plain and simple true, tell people you read it in The News.

Today's Birthday (Oct. 8). You want to break through old boundaries this year, and nothing's going to stop you. That doesn't mean you have to be crazy about it, though. Make up a plan now. The unworkable parts will soon become obvious, as will stresses you never imagined.

Aries (March 21-April 19)
Today is a 5. Always spend money as if you didn't have enough. Then you'll have enough when something unexpected comes along. You hate pinching pennies. The trick is to do it because you want to, just for fun.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)
Today is a 7. This is a good day for discussing financial matters. The subject may come up at work or at home. Let people know how you'd like to have the money disbursed. They'll spend too much if you don't.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)
Today is a 5. You're feeling better as the day goes on and things get checked off your lists. Keep busy; even do the stuff you've been putting off. You'll be amazed at how your life lightens up. If you've been having trouble thinking clearly, that could be the problem.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)
Today is a 6. The moon going into Gemini spurs you even more toward education. Gemini has insatiable curiosity, and that'll rub off on you. Some of your most interesting discoveries today will be through the grapevine.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)
Today is a 5 - You're a great team captain and today you'll get to prove that again. You've got a big job, and you're under pressure to make it happen. You'll have to motivate others to help, or the whole thing will go splat.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Today is a 6. You're strong, assertive and opinionated. That could come in handy today, since you're likely to run into an argument. You may think it's the other guy's fault, but that's only half the story. You like to stir things up once in a while, too.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Today is a 6. You're doing pretty well right now, but don't get cocky. Your plans look good, but they can get fouled up on a technicality. Don't overlook the details; that's the sort of thing that could sink the ship.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Today is a 6. Quick thinking is required today, as well as quick action. You'll have an opportunity to make a really good deal, but you'll have to be firm and decisive. A person who's selling or buying won't be, and that's your advantage.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Today is a 5. People want to tell stories today. That happens to be one of your favorite occupations, too, but be careful not to do it during working hours. There's still plenty that must be done before tomorrow.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Today is a 7. You had a bit of a free ride yesterday, but that's drawing to a close. Your luck holds this morning, but by afternoon hard work is required to achieve your goals. Don't despair. This too will pass.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Today is a 5. Your luck is improving, and holds good for the next several days. A recent frustration is starting to fade. Conditions haven't changed all that much, but your attitude is shifting. You're starting to feel like you can handle anything.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)
Today is a 5. Don't procrastinate today. A normally easy job could become practically impossible later, as distractions keep you from focusing your attention. It's hard enough for you to focus attention anyway, so do as much as you can now, while conditions are right. You'll be able to tell the difference once they change.

FIRE

Fire claims child's life in Newark

NEWARK (AP) — A house fire Tuesday killed a 1-year-old boy who was resting in his crib, authorities said.

The child's name was not being released until relatives could be notified.

A bystander, Donald Reed of Newark, who tried to help get the child out of the house, was treated at Licking Memorial Hospital for smoke inhalation, said Bob Hurst, an assistant Newark fire chief.

No one else in the home was hurt.

The fire broke out about 8:30 a.m. in the two-story home near downtown Newark, about 30 miles east of Columbus. Firefighters were able to put it out quickly, and they found the child's body in a first-floor bedroom, Hurst said.

The fire's cause had not been determined, he said. Burn patterns and flames spotted at the scene have led firefighters to suspect the blaze started near the first-floor bedroom, he said.

DIVERSITY

OSU seeks to improve diversity on campus

COLUMBUS (AP) — The new president of Ohio State University says he plans to open a dialogue on race.

William E. Kirwan, who became the school's president in July, announced programs Tuesday including town hall-style meetings on race — one each quarter, on dates yet to be determined. Kirwan reaffirmed that racial and ethnic diversity are top priorities, and he said the university will participate in a national initiative that supports affirmative action.

The school's position on diversity and its objectives will be mapped out by a team of OSU officials led by Interim Provost Ed Ray. Kirwan appointed him to evaluate what Ohio State is doing about diversity.

Plenty of offices at Ohio State are working on racial issues and diversity, but no one is coordinating and evaluating those efforts, Ray said.

"We hope what will come out of this are some recommendations, and that we can learn some lessons," he said.

Last year, about 13.2 percent of OSU's students, 11.8 percent of the faculty and 18.5 percent of the staff were minorities.

It also was a year marked by a weeklong sit-in at the OSU Office of Minority Affairs, during which black students said the university was not paying enough attention to their needs and ideas.

Guidelines proposed for prisons

Lawmakers release results of investigation into Youngstown prison breaks.

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Privately run prisons in Ohio should meet the same standards as the state's lockups and be kept from housing violent inmates, a legislative committee recommended Wednesday.

"It is realistic to believe that we will be stuck with private prisons for a while, so we need to take these steps to make them safer," said Sen. Rhine McLin, co-chairwoman of the Correctional Institutions Inspection Committee.

The recommendations followed the prison oversight committee's investigation into the daylight escape of six prisoners from the Northeast Ohio Correctional Center in Youngstown. The inmates — including four convicted killers — escaped by cutting through a wire fence with wire cutters possibly supplied by a prison employee. They were recaptured.

Corrections Corporation of America, the prison's operator, ordered security changes immediately after the escape. The Nashville-based company has been under attack since it opened the medium-security prison in May 1997.

Inmates have sued the company, claiming the prison — which has had at least 13 stabbings and two killings — is unsafe.

Dozens of Washington, D.C., inmates whose security needs exceeded the medium-security classification have been transferred out of the Youngstown prison under court order. An additional 205 inmates were to be transferred by Oct. 1, though NOCC Warden Jimmy Turner said about 60 were still awaiting transfer.

Turner said in a written statement that company officials will address the committee report as it makes its way through the Legislature. In the meantime, he said they were committed to working with state, local and federal officials.

The committee blamed prison officials in Washington, D.C., for much of the trouble in Youngstown.

"This committee does not view such a high number of 'misclassifications' as merely the product of simple mistakes, benign inadvertence or careless oversight," the report said. "We find (D.C. Department of Corrections) officials knowingly, intentionally, deliberately and willfully transported maximum security inmates to NOCC."

Prison officials in Washington, D.C., could not be reached for comment. There was no answer at the department's offices Wednesday afternoon.

Though constitutional guarantees probably prohibit the state from banning private prisons altogether, lawmakers want at least to be notified and assured by the attorney general that the prisons comply with state law, McLin said at a news conference.

DONAHUE

"I have always wanted to get involved in pop culture," Donahue said. "Coming to Bowling Green was a dream come true."

Donahue, with a combination of talent and creativity, has been breaking major ground in his artwork, particularly with his "art cars."

Donahue's artwork is currently on display at Grounds for Thought on Main Street. His art show "Grassroots Campaign" features photographs from his travels, a popular culture collage and photographs of his art cars. The exhibition will be on display until Nov. 5.

Donahue has had his visual art displayed in galleries and exhibitions throughout the United States.

Art cars are "rolling pieces of art," Donahue said, adding that they are becoming a popular art movement. He said art cars became popular in the 1960's during the psychedelic era, yet today art cars are gaining national exposure.

Donahue has created several art cars. He first art car was "The Record Car, Volume One" and his most recent art car is the "The Record Car, Volume Two."

"The Record Car, Volume Two" is a car decorated with various records and album covers. Donahue said he also used broken pieces of records to create a mosaic design. Donahue said he tries to include music in many of his art pieces.

Donahue said it only takes him a week to create an art car, yet some artists will work for months on their cars. He attributes his speedy work to the fact that he has a concept and he just goes with it.

"My artwork reflects my personality," Donahue said. "It gives me pleasure. It's a spiritual thing."

Donahue said the "Grassroots Campaign" has been in his blood ever since he can remember. He said it is his attempt to share the American experience through creative measures.

He said this art show brings him back to his roots because some of his earliest work was displayed at Grounds for Thought.

"The coffee shop is an ideal setting of Americana," Donahue said. "There is room to think, relax and take in all the images displayed."

Donahue has also displayed his art cars in the Orange Show in Houston, Texas for the past three years and the "The Record Car, Volume One" was featured on the PBS Motor Week special.

"I haven't made any money, but I have had a lot of fun," he said. "I have gotten to work with cool people and help others with their art."

Donahue said the first step in creating an art car is to sand the vehicle, then prime it and brush paint the car.

He also said art cars give everyone a chance to make art. He said for too long fine art has ruled the artistic world. He said art cars are more of a contemporary, "anything goes" art; there are no limits when it comes to art cars.

Donahue said he goes to junk shops and museums to find items for his art cars. He said he will buy an album just for the album cover. He also uses pamphlets and sheet music for his cars.

Also on display at Grounds for Thought are photographs of all the places he has traveled, including Houston, San Francisco, Chicago, Memphis and a highway in California.

Donahue said his pictures are trying to capture America and how he goes about getting to his destination. He said he is on a limited budget and he will get out on the road by any means necessary.

"I like traveling," Donahue said. "It is healthy for the mind. It is the best way to learn."

Donahue will also be one of four speakers Saturday to examine the art car phenomenon during the colloquium "Art Vehicles: Locally/Globally." He will be focusing on the art car in American popular culture starting in the 1950's and continuing through the present day.

In the future Donahue would like to work in a museum and continue to make art and explore his creative side.

"I don't want to work under someone," he said. "If you work all the time you have no time, no energy, no soul left for the creative end."

Donahue is also a musician. He is a member of the band "Universe Crew." "Universe Crew" is a four-member band that plays music dealing with social issues and politics.

Donahue said their biggest hit was "What is inside your Afro?" He also said their music is played in the United States, Australia, Japan and Europe.

He also has his own radio show, "The Mad Mix," which airs every Tuesday 8-10 p.m. on WBGU 88.1 FM. Donahue is currently working on his newest project, a book about Hines Farms, a Toledo jazz club. He said he received a Toledo grant to work on this project and he expects it to come out in the summer of 1999.

Bill Schurk, sound recording archivist, said Donahue is an excellent researcher and has a great work ethic. He said Donahue is service-oriented and is always willing to step in and help out.

"He is a great person," Schurk said. "He is the assistant you go to if you need assistance. He is a 'Matt of all trades.'"

CARS

Nathan said learning about art cars will expand students' horizons and help students look at art in a different way.

"On the surface they are fun, but they also allow a student to take a new look at something commonplace," Nathan said.

This weekend the celebration will continue with exhibitions and guest speakers. Best will be discussing his work Friday at 6 p.m. in room 204 of the Fine Arts Center.

At the same time the exhibition "On the Road: Art Cars" will open. This will feature the art car created during the "Art-a-Car" workshop, along with an exhibition of photographs and videos transformed into art.

In addition to the art car workshop, there will be four presentations examining the art car craze and an exhibition of photographs and videos documenting art car trends Saturday from 9-11 a.m. in room 204 of the Fine Arts Center.

Jack Santino, professor of popular culture; Karen Kakas, assistant professor of art; Matthew Donahue, graduate student in American culture studies; and Greg Phelps, a Columbus artist, will discuss various aspects of the art car phenomenon.

Donahue said art cars give everyone a chance to make art. He said a person needs both talent and creativity to be an art car artist.

"It will open their minds about new art techniques," Donahue said. "You put art on cars, rather than on canvases."

If interested in registering a vehicle for the parade, call 372-8525. The parade will begin at 1 p.m. on the corner of Clough and Main Street.

SAD

people who want to remain happy during the winter months.

"Try to be more active during the winter months, exercise more and engage in more social activities to counteract the atypical symptoms of the disorder," Drake said.

Drake claims the main difference between suffering from SAD and suffering from depression is the symptoms people experience.

"People who suffer from SAD experience atypical symptoms such as overeating, sleeping more and less energy," Drake said. "People suffering from depression have more typical symptoms such as decrease in appetite and inability to sleep," Drake said.

Those suffering from the disease should realize they can receive help and overcome the winter blues. Both Kaplan and Drake advise people who suffer from the disorder to get help through light therapy.

"Light therapy is marketed for people with seasonal affective disorder, and works when people sit 20 to 40 minutes in a light box daily," Kaplan said.

This treatment is common for people who suffer from SAD. It makes up for the decreased amount of light people receive during the winter months. Light treatment is available at the University Psychological Service Center. Those interested can contact David Connell, a clinical psychologist, or Behavioral Connections at 352-5249 to get more information.

Kaplan also advises people who tend to get a little under the weather during the winter months to live in warmer climates.

"Go to someplace where the sun is shining more," Kaplan said. "The farther south you go the better."

BG looks to NIU for big opportunity

□ The men's soccer team is looking to break a six-game winless string on the road.

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM
The BG News

Everyone is familiar with the saying, "United we stand, divided we fall."

The Bowling Green men's soccer team is trying to remind itself of that fact this week in practice after a heartbreaking 2-1 loss to Buffalo in overtime Sunday.

"I've never been concerned about us breaking down as a team," coach Mel Mahler said. "One of the things we always prided ourselves on is the moral fiber to our program. We can't be concerned about pointing fingers. We're all in this together. We've always had good team chemistry."

That good team chemistry goes back to the recruiting process. The painful part of that process is the maturing of the young athletes.

"When you're younger, you think you have all the answers," Mahler said. "You don't really realize that until you get around the block a few times and you have some successes and failures. We need to mature as a team."

The loss extended the Falcons' winless skid to six games. They have been 0-4-2 over that time. The Falcons will try to reestablish their dominance on the road Friday and Sunday when they travel to Western Michigan and Northern Illinois for Mid-American Conference showdowns.

"Basically, we're just trying to stick together and work harder than we ever have," BG senior back Darren Niles said. "I think our play is all right. We just haven't been getting many breaks. So we're just going to keep working as hard as we can. Our motto for the rest of the year is to just outwork the rest of the teams."

Last year, the Falcons defeated the Broncos 5-0 at Cochrane Field. In the team's entire history, BG has gone 21-3-1 against Western. The Broncos, 4-3-1 overall and 1-1-0 in the MAC, are under the direction of first-year head coach Chris Karwoski. They defeated Miami 1-0 before losing to Kentucky 5-4. They led the Wildcats 4-2 before falling.

Northern Illinois, under the direction of Willy Roy, is 6-1-1 overall and 0-1-0 in the MAC. Last year, BG defeated Northern Illinois 4-3 in the regular season and 4-1 in the first round of the MAC tournament.

"As long as we play our game, I think we should be fine," Niles said. "We just have to keep up our work ethic and outwork Western and Northern. Last year, we were down 3-1 against Northern here at home, then we just kept on working and working and came back."

One of the goals for the weekend is to not let one guy beat them, like Buffalo's Steve Butcher did Sunday. Butcher scored the game winning goal against the Falcons.

"Essentially, we have to get better at getting numbers forward in the attack and we have to get better at getting back so we have more numbers in defense," Mahler said. "That boils down to work ethic and anticipating."

Head over heels

Erb turns heads in her trademark throw-in move

Desiree Erb, right back for the Falcon women's soccer team, has a unique throw-in move. Each time the ball goes out of bounds, Erb tosses it in a little different than the average throw-in. She flips as she moves the ball into play. Both feet must be on the ground before the ball can be released. Here's the play by play.

- 1. First, Erb runs in with the ball high above her head.
- 2. Next, she pushes the soccer ball forward in front of her, vaulting her body forward. Erb credits her ability to do this to her previous experience as a gymnast.
- 3. After the ball hits the ground, Erb pushes herself forward and flips over to her feet.
- 4. Once she lands, Erb forces the soccer ball in front of her, placing the ball in play.
- 5. See Erb and the rest of the Falcons in action this Friday at Mickey Cochrane Field at 3 p.m.

Erb flips for Falcons

□ Freshman Desiree Erb works to perfect her play and special throw-in style.

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

Desiree Erb is an easy person to spot at Mickey Cochrane Field, especially when she's on the sidelines throwing in the ball.

Erb, a freshman forward/midfielder from Wapakoneta, Ohio, prides herself on her interesting flip throw-in technique that she has been perfecting since she was in sixth grade.

"I was watching a soccer game on TV when I was younger and I saw a guy throw the ball in this unusual way," Erb said. "I thought it was pretty cool so I went out in my backyard to try it and I have been doing it ever since. It just comes as second nature to me now."

Her technique starts off with her out of bounds and the ball in her hands. She backs up a few feet from the sideline and then runs toward it. She then places the ball on the ground to balance herself, flips over the ball and then releases it. The ball is launched back into play and the distance of the throw-in proves helpful for the Falcon offense. The whole process only lasts a few seconds, but it grabs the attention of everyone in attendance.

"Coach (Piccirillo) usually tells me to throw the ball in when we are on the offensive and close to the goal," Erb said. "I enjoy doing it and because of the length of the throw-in, it really helps our attackers who are trying to score."

Erb, who attended Wapakoneta High School, also competed in basketball, track and softball. When she was younger, she competed in gymnastics, which she credits with helping her balance herself on a soccer ball upside down.

"I used to get scared when I first started doing it," Erb said. "I only did it once in a while during the game but now I do it four or five times a game. The only time that I don't do it is when the weather is bad."

When watching her perform her throw-in, it's difficult to imagine how she doesn't hurt herself. But Erb seems confident when doing it and it is easy to see how much different and better her style is in terms of distance.

"I don't really think about getting hurt when doing it," Erb said. "There is always the possibility that I could get hurt doing it, but I try not to think about it when I am upside down (and) the only thing between me and the ground is a soccer ball."

In her first year on the women's soccer team, Erb has played in all eleven matches and started in one. She has five points, with two goals and one assist, and is tied for seventh place on the team in total points.

"I love playing soccer in college and for this team," Erb said. "This is the best team that I have ever played on and I have played on a lot of traveling and club teams."

Her biggest game of the season came during the record-setting Robert Morris game earlier in the month. The team broke the school record by scoring nine goals in one game with Erb contributing with one goal and one assist.

"The chemistry on this team is tremendous," Erb said. "The team gets along so well on and off the field that it makes it so enjoyable to play."

Women's soccer faces tough Huskies

□ The "Big dog" of the MAC, NIU, is in BG for one of the biggest games of the season

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

After going 1-1 this weekend against Central and Western Michigan, the BG women's soccer team gets ready to face Mid-American Conference favorite Northern Illinois on Friday at 3 p.m. at Mickey Cochrane Field.

With the win and the loss, Bowling Green's record moves to 6-4-1 overall and 3-2-1 in the MAC. Friday's match will be the last game of the Falcon's longest homestand of the season.

The Northern Illinois Huskies currently stand at 6-4-1 overall and 5-1-0 in the MAC. Last season, NIU won both the MAC regular season and tournament crowns. The Huskies are coached by Frank Horvat, who is in his sixth year and has compiled a record of 52-52-3.

"Northern is a great team and one of the best ones we will see all season," coach Tom Piccirillo said. "Mucci is a great player and we will have to shut her down and the rest of the team to get the win."

Piccirillo was referring to senior forward Sarah Mucci, who is regarded as the Huskies' best player and one of the best players in the MAC.

"We need to take her out of the equation," Piccirillo said. "We need to force the weaker players on that team to step it up and we have to come out ready to play."

The Falcons already have 29 goals, surpassing their total number from last year (28).

Against NIU last fall, the Falcons were shut out in their first-ever conference match, 6-0 at Cochrane field.

The Falcons start their five-match away trip with a game at Oakland (Michigan) on Monday at 3 p.m. The Golden Grizzlies are competing in their first year as a Division I program.

Netters with close call against Raiders

□ The Falcons win a breather against the Raiders to stay undefeated at home.

By NICK HURM
The BG News

The Bowling Green volleyball squad played the role of the cardiac kids last night.

After winning the first set in easy fashion, the Falcons entered a full blown battle with Wright State lasting five games and capturing their third-straight win. BG (11-7 overall, 4-1 Mid-American Conference) is 5-0 at home this year.

The Falcon match once again brought up their question of inconsistency.

"In a way it (the win) was good because we went to five games," co-captain Heather Greig said. "And we won it and took charge in game five, but there is inconsistency and this demonstrated it. Overall it is a positive thing."

Although this was not a MAC game, the competitiveness was top notch.

The "Mac killer," Heather Murphy, once again had another big night. She slammed down 31 kills, averaging over six a game and also added 15 digs. Murphy also added to key aces that helped lead BG to victory in game five. Coming into play Murphy was ranked seventh in the nation for kills per game.

Melissa Lewis was flying high adding 17 kills and Krista Davis, who is normally more of a defensive factor had an impressive .500 kill percentage as she threw down 7 kills.

Defense was lacking at times, but Lori Kemerer was the major bright spot for the Falcons. She had three key solo blocks and led BG in digs with 18.

In the final game, BG proved to be a better team. Kemerer and Lewis threw down monster kills and BG escaped with the victory.

"We needed this," coach Denise Van De Walle said. "This was a must win trying to stay undefeated at home getting ready to play Akron on Saturday."

Game one started where the Falcons left off over the weekend. BG won a decisive 15-2 victory over the Raiders. It looked like it was going to be a quick night, before things fell apart for BG.

With a 7-3 victory in game two the Raiders rallied tying it 10-10. BG took a time out, but it didn't help the matter. Wright State overcame the first game embarrassment winning 15-11. The Falcons were beginning to show signs of previously lost matches.

In game three the Falcons turned things around as Lewis and Murphy piled up kill after kill. Right Side hitter Chris Pesorda also added to the offense slamming balls down with authority. The old BG was back and it went on to win 15-12.

BG was about to close the victory in game four when Wright State came back from a 14-10 deficit and shocked the home crowd beating the Falcons 16-14.

BG tennis teams encounter tough weekend ahead

□ The women's tennis team heads to the Ohio State tournament, while the men go to Austin for the ITA All-American Pre-Qualifier.

By DAVE TRUMAN
The BG News

This weekend brings the strongest competition of the fall season for both the men's and women's tennis teams.

The Bowling Green women travel to Columbus on Friday for the Ohio State tournament, while men's coach Jay Harris and senior co-captains Matt Wiles and Radu Bartan are on their way to Austin, Texas.

Women's coach Penny Dean could only speculate as to what teams would be in Columbus as of Wednesday. She knows OSU will be there and her Falcons have been preparing for the toughest matches of the year.

According to Dean, the team has been scrimmaging more this week, as opposed to focusing on drills and mechanics, in an effort to get ready for the increased intensity level they expect to find.

Dean said that Eastern Michigan and Akron might be there, along with teams from larger schools like Notre Dame and Iowa. She expects 10 to 12 teams in all.

The format will consist of seven flights of 16 players and will feature singles and doubles action.

BG's goal at the beginning of the fall was to peak at the Mid-American Conference Individual Tournament. Dean said that the level of play in practice has slipped somewhat during the two-week layoff since the Michigan State Invitational. Still, she is confident the Falcons will be ready to play this weekend and, more importantly, next weekend at the MAC tournament.

"This tournament will be tough but we are ready for it," she said. "It's stronger than the MAC so it will be a good lead in. Once the players get on the bus I know they will be psyched."

Going on the road doesn't intimidate the Falcons, even though they know the competition will feature some of the best players in the country.

Sophomore Meghan Rhodes said the fall road trips are much easier than those in the spring, because the players spend three days at an opposing school in the fall and get used to the courts and atmosphere.

"It's not like a dual match where you're just there to play and leave," Rhodes said. "We know all the other teams will be very tough so this is the time to go out and play hard and not worry about wins and losses. I think everyone is playing solid right now and we should have enough confidence coming off this to go to the MAC strong."

Junior Deedee Bissinger said she misses the fan support on the road, but most of the player's parents follow the team and that makes it seem a little like home.

"Road trips are a lot of fun and they bring us together as a team," she said. "Playing matches is the best way to get ready for the MAC. It's been on our minds the whole time."

While the women are in the state capital, Harris, Wiles and Bartan will be in longhorn country.

This ITA Tournament is one of four major grand slam tournaments in the nation, according to Harris, and it will feature the best players in the country.

As for how well his players will do in such a prestigious tournament, Harris is uncertain.

"BG has never been represented at this tournament in the past so it is a new experience for everyone," Harris said. "Hopefully these guys will enjoy it and have a good time. I really don't have any idea how far they can go because it is our first experience there. A lot will depend on our draw."

Bartan and Wiles qualified for the tournament based on their records from last year and will play singles and doubles on Saturday and Sunday.

Bartan said getting up for the competition will be easy and he is not worried about playing against the best.

"I'm looking forward to it," he said. "It's easy to play your best down there. I'm going to try and beat some great players."

Harris, Bartan and Wiles will join the rest of the team next week for the Kentucky Invitational in Lexington.

NEW YORK — The umpires botched the call, Chuck Knoblauch blew his cool and the Cleveland Indians escaped Yankee Stadium with a split.

After 11 innings of excruciatingly intense baseball, Game 2 of the AL championship series turned on a bizarre bunt play in the 12th inning Wednesday.

Umpires failed to call Travis Fryman out for interfering with Tino Martinez's throw as he ran inside the line on his bunt attempt, and Enrique Wilson broke a 1-all tie by scoring all the way from first base as Knoblauch stood at the bag pointing and arguing, instead of picking up the ball.

Kenny Lofton followed with a two-run single, and the Indians beat New York 4-1, evening the AL championship series at one game apiece.

"I started out inside the line and when I knew I could get by Tino, I tried to straighten out a little bit," Fryman said.

It was a play that will surely be debated, much like J.C. Martin's controversial bunt that won Game 4 of the 1969 World Series for the New York Mets against Baltimore.

"It was so blatant. I don't know what to say. It was a terrible call," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "There was no line ever touched."

Forget about domination, and put revenge on hold — plays like this can turn a series around.

Jim Thome singled off Jeff Nelson leading off the 12th, Cleveland's first runner since Omar Vizquel tripled with one out in the eighth. Wilson ran for Thome, and Fryman sent a bunt up the first-base line to Martinez.

Martinez threw to Knoblauch, the second baseman who was covering the first-base bag, and the ball hit Fryman, who was clearly running in fair territory, in the back.

Baseball rules require that a runner be on the foul side of the line for the final 45 feet to first base, but it is up to the umpire's judgment whether a runner interferes with the play.

"The play occurred right at the base," crew chief Jim Evans said. "The fact that he was literally on the base or half a step from the base, he has the right to be in that position."

Evans said there are two keys. "Is it a throw that would have retired him, and how close is he to the base?" Evans said. "He has the right to be in fair territory that close to the base."

While Wilson rounded second, Knoblauch was pointing at the base, trying to get first-base umpire John Shulock or plate umpire Ted Hendry to reverse the call.

While Wilson rounded third, Knoblauch still was pointing.

Finally, he picked it up, but it was too late. Wilson, who nearly tripped himself up as he headed home, sprawled into the plate with the go-ahead run.

"I thought we'd have to get a wheelbarrow out there for a while," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said.

Torre argued to no avail. "I thought they made the right call," Hargrove said. "If I were on the other side, I might have a different opinion."

Torre also was angry at Hendry's calls behind the plate.

"The ball-strike stuff stunk tonight, but it stunk for both sides," he said.

In blowing out Jaret Wright in the first inning of Game 1 Tuesday and cruising to a 7-2 victory, the Yankees looked invincible, just like they did during the regular season. But maybe avenging last year's loss to Cleveland in the first round won't be so easy for the Yankees, who lost for the first time in five postseason games this fall.

Right from Kenny Lofton's game-opening flyout to the warning track in center, the Indians seemed different. David Cone nearly matched Charles Nagy, but the top of the New York batting order, nearly silent in the first-round sweep of Texas, once again spluttered.

David Justice put the Indians ahead with a fourth-inning homer off Cone — the first time the Yankees trailed this postseason — but Scott Brosius' RBI double tied the score in the seventh and chased Nagy, who had been working on a four-hit shutout.

Cleveland is used to coming from behind in the postseason. This is the eighth straight time the Indians lost a series opener.

After an off day, the series resumes Friday night at Jacobs Field in Cleveland, with Andy Pettitte (16-11) pitching for New York against Bartolo Colon (14-9).

Dave Burba, the sixth of seven Cleveland pitchers, was the winner, and Mike Jackson got the save. Nelson, the fourth of five New York pitchers, was the loser.

Nagy and Cone were brilliant. Nagy, who beat Boston in Game 3 last week after winning five of his last six decisions in the regular season, allowed one run and five hits in 6 2-3 innings, striking out five and walking one.

Cone, who wanted to atone for an awful start in the opener against Cleveland last year, gave up five hits in eight innings, striking out five and walking three.

Justice, only 3-for-18 against Cone in his career, homered for the first hit off Cone, sending an 0-1 pitch over the fence in right as Paul O'Neill came close to denying him with a leaping catch.

Cleveland then loaded the bases on walks to Manny Ramirez and Brian Giles around a single by Fryman. But Sandy Alomar stranded them when he grounded to first.

Vizquel created another great chance when he sliced an opposite-field triple off the left-field line with one out in the eighth.
